About Artists

Claire Hankey

My abstract paintings are inspired by memories of childhood and nature walks near my home, along the Thames Estuary. Plants collected from my garden are often used as mark making tools and as inspiration for ongoing work. Glimmers of landscapes, ambiguous botanical forms and textures found in nature are all recurring motifs within my work.

The paintings selected for this series with Petra are richly layered and capture the feeling of something that has been touched by the elements. In this unique collection we wanted to create work that explored how nature and time leave their marks on this world. We hope this collection encourages viewers to pause and reflect on their own connections with nature.

Petra Blacklock

My approach to every photoshoot is truly collaborative – a creative journey we embark on together. Working with Claire on this project has been especially meaningful, as it connected me with my love for gardens and stirred up cherished memories of my childhood and my grandmother, who passed down her passion for growing flowers. Pottering around my flower and kitchen garden brings me lots of joy and grounds me in a way that feels deeply healing.

The concept of blending my photography with Claire's pieces was inspired by a previous photoshoot, one that was both creative and a joy to bring to life. This fusion allows each piece to tell a story that reflects both our artistic visions, creating something uniquely collaborative and engaging.
